1. INTRODUCTION

The Resolution Policy replaces the Grievance (B.2 & NGH-PC-41) and Bullying and Harassment (NGH-PO-072) Policies across UHN and is a different approach to resolving workplace issues, aligned to UHN's values that supports an open and honest environment where workplace issues are talked through, addressed and resolved at the earliest opportunity.

This policy draws on six core principles:

- Fairness
- Compassion
- Mutual respect
- Empathy
- Dignity
- Dialogue

The Trust recognises that a positive working environment and good working relationships have a positive impact on colleague wellbeing and engagement. A positive working environment can also lead to better performance, improved colleague retention and reduced stress related sickness absence. Focusing on resolution is good for our organisation, it is good for our colleagues, and it is good for our patients.

The Trust also recognises that conflict in the workplace is normal and, in many cases, inevitable. When it does happen, we wish to support colleagues and managers to work together to resolve any disagreements and conflicts constructively and speedily. Resolution that is owned by those involved is more likely to provide lasting solutions.

The policy provides an overview of the process the Trust will follow to resolve disagreements. It is intended to create an open and honest environment that empowers colleagues to raise a "Request for Resolution" for any workplace concern that they have as soon as possible and to work together with colleagues to resolve them. More detail on the process and the support available to colleagues can be found in the accompanying toolkit and on K-net and The Street.

The principles within this policy also underpin how the Trust will deal with disciplinary matters, alleged bullying and harassment complaints as well as other concerns. The intention is that, where appropriate, issues are resolved at the earliest opportunity without resorting to the formal process.

2. PURPOSE

The Resolution Policy is aimed at securing constructive and lasting solutions to workplace disagreements, conflicts and complaints. It is suitable for the following types of issues:

UHN Resolution Policy

- Any concerns or disagreements between colleagues
- Any concerns or disagreements within or between teams
- Disagreements between managers and members of their team
- Concerns or complaints about the allocation or distribution of resources
- Concerns or complaints about the actions or inactions of the Trust
- Allegations of bullying, discrimination and harassment

The purpose of the policy is to provide an accessible, inclusive and constructive way for people to have their issues heard, with a view to learning, resolving or correcting any mistakes or wrongdoing. There is also the Speaking Up Policy where colleagues can raise concerns to the Freedom to Speak Up (FTSU) Guardian. Where there is a concern about inappropriate patient care, health and safety or fraud, bribery or corruption at work, staff have the option of speaking up to the Freedom to Speak Up Guardian and where an appropriate, informal resolution or escalation for investigation may be necessary.

This policy encourages early resolution and empowers colleagues to work together in a supportive, safe environment to reach resolution. It is an expectation that colleagues will cooperate in exploring early resolution as an alternative to a formal process, however it is recognised that in some circumstances a formal approach may be necessary. The 'Just Culture Guide' in the toolkit should be applied to support consistent decision making and guidance.

The main options for resolution available through the policy include:

- Early Resolution meetings between managers and colleagues
- Informal discussion within department
- Facilitated conversation
- Mediation
- Coaching
- Facilitated move
- Investigation to establish the facts if necessary
- Formal resolution meeting
- Appeals

3. SCOPE

This policy applies to all Trust colleagues including doctors. Other colleagues, e.g. contractors, locums and agency staff employed to carry out duties within the Trust premises on behalf of the Trust will be covered by the protocols specified in contractual arrangements with third party organisations.

Where concerns are raised that involves colleagues from across the UHN group, the matter will be addressed by the employing Trust of the colleague that raised the matter. If upon concluding the process, action is required for a colleague of a different employing trust, this will be managed by the employing trust of the colleague identified.

UHN Resolution Policy

Any disagreement should be treated in a fair and consistent way and dealt with quickly and supportively. This approach can be used for individuals and groups when there is a collective complaint.

The following are excluded from this procedure and the appropriate policy/procedure should be referred to:

- Disciplinary matters
- Job Evaluation/Banding Reviews – unless concern relates to backdating of payment
- Any terms and conditions of employment that are either set nationally or by local collective bargaining procedures
- Any concerns at work about patient care or matters of business probity/conduct

4. SUBSTANTIVE CONTENT

The following principles should be applied to every issue raised under this policy:

- Ensure the Trust's values guide the actions and behaviours throughout the application of this policy.
- Ensure that all people involved feel able to openly engage in the resolution processes.
- Ensure the health and wellbeing of all involved is considered throughout the process.
- It is expected that most issues will be resolved informally, however it is recognised that colleagues have the right to raise concerns formally.
- Ensure decisions are supported by a consistent framework and that they are well informed, justified and appropriate for the circumstances (see Just Culture Guide in toolkit).
- Ensure identification of key members (stakeholders) involved/affected in the application of the policies and procedures, to ensure regular communication is maintained.
- Ensure timely, detailed, clear, sensitive and compassionate communication throughout.
- Be underpinned by thorough and consistent decision-making.
- Ensure objectivity is maintained at every stage of the process by decision makers.
- Ensure any perceived or identified conflict of interest is responded to.
- Be carried out without unreasonable delay.
- Be sensitive and respectful to all involved members.
- Seek to explore and not to pre-judge.
- Seek to establish facts.
- Be part of a learning culture where appropriate feedback is given and utilised to improve the service.

- Have accurate notes captured where appropriate, complying with the principles of General Data Protection Regulations (GDPR).
- Ensure agreed timescales are regularly reviewed and not drawn-out.
- Where a formal approach is taken, ensure decisions are not taken by one person alone.
- Ensure confidentiality throughout the process and thereafter when the resolution has been reached.
- Provide an appropriate briefing/closure for all involved.

4.1. Process

The process is outlined within a flowchart for ease of reference at Appendix 1 and is described in detail in the following sections.

All complaints must be raised within 3 months of the incident/concern unless there are exceptional circumstances preventing this (e.g. an ongoing issue relating to bullying and harassment).

4.2. Request for Resolution

You can make a request for resolution either verbally or in writing to your line manager.

Before doing this do consider talking to the colleague/s concerned as it may be that any behaviours are not deliberate, and they may not realise how their behaviour has affected you. If you feel able to talk to them first, then think about what you want to say beforehand. Describe what's been happening and why you object to it. Stay calm and be polite. If you do not want to talk to them yourself, you can ask someone else to do it for you.

If you have attempted this and it has not worked, or you do not feel able to then please make a request for resolution with your line manager.

If you are uncomfortable discussing the matter with your manager, you can also make contact with the People Partnering team or with one or more of these independent people who can also help you. Details of who they are and how to contact them are available on K-Net and The Street in the Resolution section:

- Freedom to Speak Up Guardian or FTSU Champions
- Trade Union Representative
- Health and Wellbeing Practitioner in Occupational Health
- Resolution Assessment (Triage)

The resolution triage discussion is an opportunity for your line manager and/or one of the parties named in 4.2 to meet with you to understand more about your issue and identify the most suitable route for resolution. This should be done at the earliest opportunity.

The information gathering can result in one (or more) courses of action:

UHN Resolution Policy

- Agreement to enter into early resolution (see section 4.3)
- Formal resolution (see section 4.4)

4.3. Early Resolution

There are a number of options available within the Trust to support early resolution which includes:

- Resolution meeting between individuals
- Informal discussion within department
- Resolution meeting with managers
- Informal meeting with Trade Union support
- Mediation
- Facilitated conversation by an independent person
- Coaching
- Facilitated move, if requested

Further details on the above can be found in the guidance documents available on the K-Net and The Street in the Resolution section.

These options enable you to be supported to resolve your issue without needing to go through a formal process. If the issue isn't satisfactorily resolved at this point you can request to go to formal resolution.

If as part of the early resolution process there are actions required for the other party, these actions will remain confidential to the colleague identified. You will be advised if your resolution has been upheld. Where appropriate a further process may be followed.

4.4. Formal Resolution

Whilst the Trust would always encourage and promote early resolution, we recognise that there are times when a more formal approach is necessary, which may be for one of the following reasons:

i) Immediate referral for formal resolution

If the resolution assessment finds that none of the early resolution options are appropriate, we can progress immediately to formal resolution. This may be because the matter is sufficiently serious to warrant a formal investigation to establish the facts and could involve recourse to the Trust's disciplinary procedure.

It is recognised that concerns relating to bullying, harassment and discrimination can have a detrimental effect on colleagues and if after discussing the informal resolution options, you want to proceed to formal resolution, then you have the right to do so.

ii) Early resolution not resolved satisfactorily

If following early resolution your issue has not been resolved satisfactorily then you can make a request for formal resolution. Any request should be put in writing to a more senior manager who has not previously been involved.

The senior manager will contact you with regards to arranging a formal resolution meeting as soon as practicable (normally within 14 calendar days) and confirm the outcome to you in writing as soon as possible, normally within 7 calendar days. If further information gathering is required before you can be notified of the decision, the timescale may be extended, and you will be informed.

You will have the right to be accompanied by a Trade Union representative or work colleague at this stage.

If the findings determine that there has been no breach of Trust policies it may be appropriate for the investigation report, including appendices, to be shared with you and the other party (if the complaint is in relation to another colleague). The Trust must comply with all applicable data protection laws when disclosing the report under the circumstances in this Clause, and as a result, information may be redacted or withheld to comply with such laws.

4.5. Appeal

You will be given the right to appeal any formal resolution. The outcome letter will explain how to appeal. You must appeal within seven calendar days of getting your outcome letter, but this will be extended in exceptional circumstances. You can appeal if you believe:

- The procedure - a failure to follow procedure had an effect on the outcome
- The decision - the evidence did not support the conclusion reached
- Any proposed action - was inappropriate given the circumstances of the case
- New evidence - which has genuinely come to light since the first hearing.

An appeal meeting will be arranged, and the process and timescales will mirror those outlined in the disciplinary policy. An appeal meeting will be conducted by a senior manager who has not been involved previously.

The appeal will be supported by a senior People Partnering representative, who has not been involved before. You may bring a trade union representative or workplace colleague as your companion. A letter confirming the outcome of the appeal will be sent to you within seven calendar days. The decision of the appeal hearing will be final.

However, it should be noted that, in line with our Just and Learning Culture, unfortunately, it will not always be the case that potential relationships will be healed and colleagues may wish to have or remain with differing views regarding a situation, but they must have had the opportunity to share their feelings/views and the Trust must do all it can to support all parties to resolution process, in order that they can move on.

4.6. Support Available

It is recognised that for all colleagues involved, the processes may be unusual or unfamiliar and therefore immediate and/or ongoing support may be required. The following support is available in addition to support offered by your line manager.

Note that if you feel unable to speak to your line manager, you may approach an alternative manager.

Trade Union Representatives / Work Colleague

You have the right to be accompanied by a Trade Union Representative or work colleague at any formal meetings held in line with the Resolution Policy. It is your responsibility to arrange accompaniment. If you require support with this, you should contact your line manager or another appropriate manager. Having a companion has many benefits including providing you with advice and support and aiding your understanding of the situation.

UHN Occupational Health and Wellbeing Services

UHN Occupational Health & Wellbeing Service can also be accessed for support

4.7. Additional Considerations

Outlined below are additional considerations which may need to be considered within the application of this policy:

Raising a Concern or Complaint During a Formal Process/Counter Allegations

Where a person who is going through any other formal process (such as formal conduct or formal attendance management) raises an issue or counter allegations under this policy, the appropriate action will be determined on a case-by-case basis. The considerations will be based on the relevance and severity of the issue which may make it inappropriate for the relevant formal process to continue, but in most cases the procedures will run parallel. It is considered in most cases that a delay to concluding a formal process and any subsequent interventions/actions may not always be in the best interests, or conducive to, the wellbeing of those involved and affected by the process itself.

Complaints Raised by Former Colleagues or during notice period

Should a former Trust colleague raise a workplace disagreement, conflict or complaint, within 3 months of their employment ending or within their notice period, the matter will be investigated, and a written response will be provided. All necessary measures to stay within the prescribed timescales of the policy framework will be taken.

Collective Requests for Resolution

If the same "Request for Resolution" is raised by two or more colleagues, these will be heard as one, not separately. If the matter cannot be resolved informally, no more than three nominated colleagues will present their case at formal hearings.

Status Quo

The status quo (i.e. the working and management arrangements which applied before the workplace disagreements, conflicts or complaint) should operate if this would not be prejudicial to patient care and/or colleagues, until the agreed procedure within the Trust has been exhausted.

Vexatious or Malicious Requests for Resolution

On a rare occasion, it may be found through investigation that a request for resolution has been raised with vexatious or malicious intent. A vexatious or malicious complaint is one that is unreasonable, without foundation and made with the intent to cause upset or hurt. This goes against the Trust's values and approach to resolution and, whilst the aim of positive resolution may prevent such instances arising, if following investigation there is reason to believe that a request for resolution has been raised with vexatious or malicious intent, this will be taken seriously and the person making the request may be subject to formal disciplinary action.
